

HIGHER EDUCATION REVIEW

Contents    Volume 41    Number 2    Spring 2009

3 And now what about reforming Cambridge governance? by G R Evans. The author, from the University of Cambridge, discusses the pressure on Oxford University to change its governance and wonders why Cambridge has been treated less stringently.

23 The Hungarian student loan scheme: six years of financing access to higher education by M Luisa Ferreira and Erika Farkas. A new institution – Diákhitel Központ – was established in Hungary in 2001, to grant loans for higher education students. The authors discuss the outcomes of the first six years' experience.

48 Trends in private higher education in Asia by Jandhyala B G Tilak. The author, from the National University of Educational Planning and Administration, New Delhi, examines recent trends in the growth of private higher education in the Asian region, the socio-economic and educational effects, and the public policies in this regard, and outlines some implications for the future.

78 Notes from North America: Fiction takes a beating by Paul Alper.

82 Books: More punctuation than equilibrium by John Pratt. Other books reviewed by Stephanie Y Evans, Norah Noblett, Phillip Hughes and Nick Sutcliffe.

95 Select annotated list of publications received compiled by Deborah Hillier.